Midnight Sounds—A Fortune-Teller

 and a Meddling Priest.

Floyd street forms a junction with Adams street a short distance southeast of the street railway stable. A portion of Floyd street nearest to the railway, like other streets opening into Adams in that vicinity, is unsettled, and is not even laid out except on the city plat. The sod is unbroken, thrifty oaks stud the ground and extend their branches to the playful winds and the singing birds. Beneath their shadows the children of the neighborhood gather in troops from the sun's heat and the dust of the street, and gambol about like lambs in a pasture.

Coming out from the bustle, the bad smells and the broiling heat of the business streets to this locality, the car passenger looks into this shady retreat and snuffs the verdure-perfumed air with a feeling of relief that makes him grateful for the trees, the grass and every pristine spot on the bosom of mother earth that has escaped the craft of man.

A LITTLE HOME.

As to the dwellings that have crowded their way into the grove on the east side there is nothing peculiar. Some are spacious and expensive, some are diminutive and cozy, and for the most part all are comfortable. The last one on the street nearest to Adams would be called comfortable for its size. It is a one story white house with the usual appendages in the rear. The house is divided into three apartments, a sitting room, a large sleeping room, and kitchen, with a pantry, etc. The spare ground about the building is planted with the family's favorite vegetables, and all is enclosed within a substantial fence. This is the home of HENRY FELL and his family, which consists of a wife and and four or five young children. The husband is in the shadowy age of forty, while the wife is in the thrift of twenty-two or three. FELL is a dock laborer, and like most of his fellows, has love for the juice of the vintage. Of course he hasn't a great income, and his house is not so gaily decked as others, but his family seems to have all the necessary comforts. FELL was never educated, and he grew into manhood with nothing but stout hands with which to battle his way through life. Mrs. FELL is a kind and indulgent mother, who was deprived of an education, and who shared in her childhood the common wants of the humble and the

At 3 P. M. to-day the thermometer indicated 82 deg. in the shade, at an elevation of 112 feet.

LENT'S CIRCUS.—LENT's great New York Circus will exhibit in this city during the coming month.

STREET SPRINKLING.—The engine supplying the water for the street sprinkler, is broken, and the city will have to stand the dust until it is repaired, which will probably be by next Monday.

POLICE COURT.—In the Police Court this morning, Chas. Barrett was fined $33 20 and sent to jail 30 days for stealing.

Patrick Conley was fined $3 20 for drunkenness.

For indecent exposure, Wm. Hallam paid $8 20.

Christian Bigler was arraigned for burglary and rape, but his examination was continued till to morrow.

APPOINTMENT OF A CAPTAIN OF POLICE.

—At a meeting of the Police Board yesterday afternoon the vacancy long standing in the command of the force, was filled by the election of Detective J. A. PARKER as Captain. Captain PARKER has for a long while served on the force in the capacity of detective, and he brings to his higher office valuable experience and a thorough familiarity with police duties. Captain PARKER will make a good officer.

EDUCATIONAL.—The Young Ladies' Seminary, under the control of Prof. BOYD, at Monroe, is receiving numerous applications, and the indications are that there will be a large class in attendance. The musical department is under the charge of Profs. BROWN and HARDICK, two accomplished teachers, and there will be a large number of advanced pupils on organ, piano, and in Harmony and Thorough Bass. It is a superior school and one in which pupils can go as far in the higher branches as they choose.

A PLEASANT INCIDENT.—Last evening two ladies at the depot were contemplating with no very contented mind the thought of having to spend two or three hours there in waiting for a train. People never feel satisfied with themselves for missing the train that they should have taken, and, casting about for a place to spend the time, they chanced to see the rules of the Bethel Reading Room, and thither they betook themselves. After a quiet waiting that slipped

A FINE FUNERAL CAR.

The well-known undertaker, Mr. A. B. Couldwell, of 510 Monroe street, has just purchased a handsome new funeral car, which is by far the finest in the state. The carving and workmanship throughout is of the best. A host of Mr. Couldwell's friends are admiring this beautiful car, and congratulating him on having the best in Toledo or vicinity. This magnificent car is the first one of this style and design made by the Riddle Coach and Hearse Co., Ravenna, Ohio, and is a beauty.
