Wrestling, Some Wallops, and The Cops At An Empire Bout

Three policemen and a detective carried off the honors in a "rough house" athletic meet at the Empire Friday night.

A diversified program regaled the spectators. Two fist fights, a battle royal, some "rassling" and a superfluos of sizzling oratory came close to precipitating a panic.

The preliminary skirmishes indicated a battle that would have made an engagement between Mexican federals and insurrectos look like a game of lawn tennis, had not the coppers interfered.

The trouble started after Johnny Billeter and Gus Gavolas had tugged for nearly an hour and a half on the mat, without either gaining a fall. Johnny threw the Greek against some "props," and the latter turned the match into a prize fight. Billeter is no novice at this game.

Referee Ollie Pecord attempted to stop hostilities when a couple of Gavolas's countrymen went to his assistance, and the balloon went up.

POLICE TO STAMP OUT LOOTING OF REFUSE CANS BY CHILDREN

That little children are compelled by their parents to leave their homes as early as 4 o'clock in the morning and prowl the streets of the city for the purpose of robbing city garbage wagons and garbage cans of their refuse, to be used as food, was a condition revealed today when City Server Cowell appealed to Safety Director Mooney for police aid in putting a stop to the practice.

Mooney, in response, says that parents responsible for these conditions will be prosecuted if it is in the power of the police.

Cowell's appeal was based on a report made to him by Henry Evans, inspector of garbage collection. Investigation has shown that scores of little children are sent out in the early morning with push carts, cans and bags to collect garbage.

CARRY REFUSE HOME.

In some cases it is said that the best of the refuse is used as food by the collectors. The rest is used as chicken or hog feed. Investigation has shown that many of the children come from families well able to supply the children with plenty of food.

The children are directed by the parents to frequent the fashionable west end district and the hotels and restaurants in the business district. "I have learned," says Cowell, "that it is a common practice for these children to pick out pieces of meat and vegetables and bread from these garbage cans and eat them."

Cowell explains that Evans has tried to correct the practice and has taken Probation Officer Westfall of the juvenile court around with him to observe conditions.

"But," adds Cowell, "little seems

Officer Who Jailed Ravoil-Rochelle Gets His Victim a Job Here.

Wife of Imprisoned Man Works in Restaurant to Support Family While Guiltless Her Husband Is in Prison.

Confined in the county jail for several months, while his wife worked in a restaurant to support herself and children, Louis Ravoil-Rochelle, accused of swindling A. Shamy, an Adams street fruit dealer, out of $800, has been released on his own recognizance, pending the report of the grand jury. It is understood that no indictment will be found against him.

Ravoil-Rochelle, who was an expert machinist, on Wednesday took a job, which was found for him by Detective Cairl, who brought Ravoil-Rochelle to Toledo from Indianapolis, where he was arrested with Emil Lolenni. Cairl was accused of legally kidnaping Ravoil-Rochelle.

Mrs. Ravoil-Rochelle, who visited her husband almost daily, is happy. She declares that she has the proof that her husband was in Indianapolis, when Shamy lost his money.

"I had to work hard, but I don't mind that. Louis is out now, and I know he is innocent," she told her friends. Mrs. Ravoil-Rochelle, with her children clinging to her skirts, was waiting for her husband when he was released, Tuesday afternoon.

RAVOI WAS GUILTLESS.

Police who have investigated the case say there is practically no evidence against Ravoil-Rochelle, though his companion, Lolenni, is still in jail.

When Ravoil-Rochelle and Lolenni were brought here by Detective Cairl, the authorities at Indianapolis charged that the prisoners had been legally "kidnaped," and that it was a repetition of the McNamara case.

Mayor Whitlock ordered that the men be returned to Indianapolis. As Ravoil-Rochelle and Lolenni were being taken to a train, county officials secured possession of the men on a writ of habeas corpus.

Judge Johnson, after a hearing, ordered the county officials to remain in charge of the men. Mayor Whitlock personally appeared in the case.
